Ann Brann Will Edit School Yearbook, The Volunteer

Ann Brann has been selected for the editor of the yearbook, 1940-41. Mr. Phillips requests that any student interested in this publication, see him or Miss Brann. He is especially interested in students who have artistic ability. Mr. Phillips said, "We really appreciate the cooperation of the students in having their pictures made at the first of the school. This will save time and expense later on in the year. It will save the student body some $10 or $50, as the yearbook is out with the students' money. All the sophomores who have not had their pictures made, please do so."

Many Students from Martin Enroll at U of T Jr. College

Probably the largest number of students ever to enroll at the Junior College from Martin have about completed registration at the college, prepared to open. Those thus far recorded from Martin are: Laura Branch, Ryan, Louise Priestley, Maud Myrick, Ruby Nolle, Staal, Martha Higgs, Reba Weldon, Martha Sue Trevathan, Gertrude Seates, Elwyn Fowler, Sara Adams, Sara Garner, Elizabeth Higgs, Mary Eliza, both Higgs, Mary Elizabeth Fugate, Pauline Pritchett, William Martin, Douglas Biers, Douglas Moore, Irvins Beale, Harold Butler, Walter Higgs, William Vincent, Paul Burton, Bill Lewis, Elbert Bart Greene, Billie Nell, and Truett Jones.

Bonfire and Pep Meeting Staged As Prelude To the Vol-S'Western Grid Game

Last night, U. T. had its usual bonfire and pep meeting. Each freshman, as is the custom, was expected to bring ten boxes as his admission fee, and the fire of boxes was almost mountainous. As a freshman after freshman arrived and threw on more boxes. At last the fire was lighted and the blazing light from the huge fire, the cheerleaders, led by LaRue Pentecost "blazed forth" also, with some very energetic yells and very peppy songs.

Mr. Gartin had charge of affairs and made a very nice introductory speech. Then he called on Mr. Meek to have a few words which were enjoyed by all. Next, he asked Mr. Hug, head of the athletic department, to speak to the students and this, too, was enjoyed. Miss Elliot was next called on, and she responded to the satisfaction and appreciation of every one.

Herbert Dyeus was of course called to the platform wagon, and he, too, did very nicely. Afterwards, the cheer leaders again led the students in a group of very peppy yells, and led them in singing the Alma Mater.

The crowd then broke up to some extent, but most of them went over to the football bleachers and watched the team go through some of their feats. Again the cheerleaders, headed by La Rue, led the crowd in giving yells, and many new ones were practiced. A new one that somewhat resembles a skyrocket in a sound, seemed to be the favorite.

At last the meeting broke up with a final singing of the Alma Mater, and every one left feeling quite energetic and pepped up.

First Freshman Assembly

Monday morning at 8:30, the freshmen assembled in the college auditorium for specific instructions on how to register. Mrs. Myrtle Phillips and Mr. Gene Stanford delivered messages on "Instructions for Registering." Mr. David C. Allen, chairman of the meeting, gave the general announcements. A short talk on "Choosing Your College Course" was given by Mr. J. E. McMahan.

Kroll Regional Advisor For Southern Magazine

Will Be Associated With Charles Belle Burke and Others of Note

The "Southern Literary Messenger" for September lists Kroll among its various fiction, poetry, drama, folklore and book review advisers. "With justifiable pride," we quote "the Southern Literary Messenger announces its Advisory Editors. These men and women will make their influence felt, beginning with the November issue. Authors, artists, and musicians, who move in the highest planes of their professions."

Two other advisory editors of other parts of the South are Rose Wilder Lane and Emmett Kilpatrick of Alabama. Frederick Kock of the University of North Carolina, Archibald Rutledge, Post Laureate of South Carolina, interesting to the junior college because he is author of the text book in English at the University of Tennessee, are among the distinguished names that Kroll will be associated with in this editorial capacity.

Move Under Way To Bring Orchestra Here

Bohanna Kryl, world famous cornetist and conductor, is passing through Martin on a tour, with a 50 piece symphony orchestra. Mr. Kryl is himself a musician of international fame and he has assembled, under his directorship, a group of the finest musical performers in America. He has agreed to stop off at Martin, for a very reasonable guarantee, and give an afternoon concert.

Symphony orchestras make the most beautiful music known to man. An opportunity of this magnitude seldom comes to a school and town of our size. October 16 is the date set for the concert. With the cooperation of all schools and civic organizations in this territory, it will be an easy matter to pack the auditorium of the Physical Education building. The committee appointed by Mr. Meek to prepare this musical treat is composed of Mr. Paul Hug, Professor S. E. Woods, B. E. Farrar and Dr. C. Allen.

Let every one who has a heart for fine music and high class entertainment take in this performance. Students should inform their parents in other towns so that they may plan to attend.

Dr. Lindbeck, New Prof. Of Chemistry, Found to Be Gifted Young Man

By HELEN GOODWIN

The moment I hit Martin, one of the first cries which greeted my ears was "We've got a new chemistry teacher! We've got a new chemistry teacher!" Most of the girls in the dormitory could be overheard commenting on his very good looks, and not a few were the compliments. I heard passed on his wife. So, naturally, my interest was at its keenest to see just what and how and who these two new marvels were.

I met them, or rather I saw them when I went to the dining hall for supper, and I, too, was very much impressed with their manner and, if they must be added—their appearance, for they are a very attractive couple.

Not being satisfied with my glance at supper, I went over to see Dr. Lindbeck at his office in order to meet him and to talk with him, and then I found him quite pleasant in conversation as I had imagined he would be.

He answered my questions very graciously, and I found out something like this. He hails from Rockford, Illinois, and it was there that he finished high school. He then attended the University of Illinois for two years and graduated from Beloit College in 1936. After finishing at Beloit, Dr. Lindbeck was given a teaching appointment at the University of Wisconsin. There he worked under Professor Kahlenberg, noted for his work on the ionization theory. In 1937, Dr. Lindbeck got a Ph. D. and in 1940 a Ph. D., both from the University of Wisconsin. From his watch chain there were dangling a number of fraternity keys which he told me were of the Sigma Xi, an honorary research society, the Phi Lambda Upsilon, an honorary chemical fraternity, and the Alpha Chi Sigma, a professional chemical fraternity.

When I made inquiry about Mrs. Lindbeck, he remarked that she too, claims Rockford for her home town, and that before their marriage, in 1938 she was a personal secretary. She is also interested in sewing and fancy work.

In addition to (or should I say in spite of?) his work and interest in inorganic chemistry while in college, Dr. Lindbeck also engaged in quite a number of various activities. He sang tenor in the Varsity Glee Club at the University of Illinois and the A. Cappella Choir at Beloit College. He also was a member of the Beloit College Band and the University of Illinois Regimental Band. He also plays the piano, but he added that this was "largely for his own amusement."

As for his hobbies, he almost knocked me out of my seat with the calm statement that he was quite interested in numismatics. However, he kindly explained that this was coin collecting. Dr. Lindbeck has a collection made up chiefly of pennies, some of which date as far back as 1812, but he added that he also was interested in collecting modern coins.

There must be something of the artist in him in addition to all the rest, for he spoke of his office "being very nicely done in blue and cream." He also spoke of laboratory and of strong odors, flowers, and "personal touchings" here and there.

When I asked him pointblank (for the sake of my students) whether he thought the course this year in chemistry would be a head-aching, back-breaking, hair-the-midnight-and-kind-of-awake-in-other-words, hard, as might be said, he smiled and said, "I don't know. I've needed rather lately that he would not put me across the "medium."

As for next week here, I am taking a little time to see that the organization of one and to help with the

Vollette Staff For First Quarter Is Announced

Staff of the Volette already appointed consists of Colleen Terry, editor, James Glasgow, business manager, Fritz Hamilton, general campus reporter, and Helen Goodwin, features.

At a preliminary meeting called for Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock, H. H. Kroll, sponsor, will accept applications for other spots on the staff.

This meeting is not a Scribblers club meeting, but is called for the purpose of making up a working staff.

If you have had experience on your school paper or wish to gain experience on The Volette, whether freshman or sophomore, you are cordially invited to be present at this meeting, and identify yourself with the publication, if you find you are interested.

Remember—five o'clock Monday afternoon.

Student Council Has First Meeting of the Year

The All Students' Club Council, which is made up of six the presidents of all the clubs on the campus, will hold its first meeting of the year Monday night at the I. A. building at 7:00 p.m.

Faculty Reception To Be Held On Saturday Night

On Saturday night, Sept. 28th, at 8:00 p.m., in the Home Economics building, the faculty of the Junior College will have a reception for the entire student body. This affair is held in order that the new students may have an early occasion to become acquainted with their faculty, and that the returning Sophomores may greet their old acquaintances along with the new teachers. All students are invited to attend.

Our Library

"The library, as we well know, is the very center of school activities. It enables us to gather information for class reports and for our own personal benefit; not to speak of the vast amount of pleasure and recreation derived.

"In return for these benefits, a student has duties and obligations to the library which he must not overlook. It is his first duty to be as orderly and as quiet as possible while in the library. It is impossible for one to study and to concentrate while others thoughtlessly cause a disturbance. It is the student's duty to care for library property, while entrusted to him, as if he were the owner. Carelessly handled books are an expense in addition to their untidy appearance. It is his duty to return books on time, for often the demand is greater than the supply.

"The library is an organization. Organizations must have standards and regulations. Libraries are not exceptions. Our library regulations must be obeyed and its standards upheld if its real purpose is to be accomplished. Let us all cooperate and make our library what it should be."

supervision of it, if he is needed in the capacity.

As I turned to go, I happened to glance in the lecture room, and my eye fell on the rows and rows of the empty seats, and I thought how soon they would be filled with eager, squirming, bored, or otherwise, students. Then I glanced at the shining blackboard, and I thought how soon it would be covered with all sorts of chemical signs and equations.

But the reflection only lasted one small moment, and as I turned to look back at our very versatile new chemistry teacher and to thank him for his kindness in giving me this interview, he said "And I think you might add that we like it here. The most thing about Martin is its people." And somehow after that, I didn't feel sorry for those chemistry students who are so soon to fill those vacant chairs, because I could see that anyone who really tried wouldn't have to worry too much. As far as I'm concerned, I say let's do all we can to make Dr. and Mrs. Lindbeck really like it here, because I know you're going to like them, and like having them here. I just know it. I can tell.

Largest Student Body in the History of the School Is Anticipated

Registration will start Thursday at the Junior College, with an unofficial estimate of probably 350 students and fifty students as the top number by the time a few more had been registered. This would be the largest enrollment ever at the Junior College.

The freshman class this year is unofficially estimated as better than two hundred, also greater than any other class. Of course, final figures are not in. There is always some net loss. Students that come in but fail to stay for some reason will have to be deducted. But after all the changes it is believed, Mr. Meek stated, that this year's student body will show the usual healthy percentage of growth as has been the case every year since he became executive of the college.

Numbered among this year's freshmen are some of the outstanding students of their high schools—leaders in their respective classes. This is very gratifying, and indicates not only a growth in numbers but also in the level of intellectual and cultural rating of the student body.

Official figures will not be available, however, until some time next week, according to Mrs. Myrtle Phillips, registrar of the Junior College.

Mr. T. J. Campbell

The Volette wishes to express its deep sympathy with Mrs. Paul Meek in the loss of her father, Mr. T. J. Campbell.

Mr. Campbell was 76 years old. His home was at Dayton, Tenn., where Mr. and Mrs. Meek visited at the time of the funeral last week. Mr. Campbell was associated with three newspapers during his career, as owner, editor, or publisher. For ten years he was with the Dayton, Tennessee Herald; then he was with the Chattanooga Times, and the Knoxville Sentinel. He was a past president of the Tennessee Press Association.

In addition to his long connection with state journalism Mr. Campbell was author of two important books dealing with the Tennessee scene. In 1932 he published "The Upper Tennessee," a record of navigation of the Tennessee River, and this work was significant for its connection with TVA. In August, 1940, he published "Records of Rhea," a social and biographical history of Rhea County. He finished this work, and had the gratification of seeing it published before his death.

Mr. Meek Asks That Those Interested in Civil Pilot Course, Confer With Him

Paul Meek, executive officer, requests all students in the Junior College who are interested in civil pilot training see him as early as possible and secure application forms, and discuss with him the opportunities such training offers.

While the program has not been fully worked out, and it is not absolutely certain the Junior College will offer courses in flying, Mr. Meek was as certain as he could be that in the end all the difficulties now standing in the way will be ironed out, and the flying course established in our school. Planes have been provided, all routine material for enrolling students sent from Washington, and only a minor problem in selection of a field remains to clear up, Mr. Meek said.

It is interesting to note, Mr. Meek pointed out, that G. J. Paulie, who is aeronautics director for Tennessee, stated recently in discussion the hazard of student flying, that in the eighteen months he has been director there has not been a single accident, of even a minor character, in all the state work.

OUR ADVERTISERS

The first issue of The Volette, as you notice, is heavy with advertising. Perhaps you will think that's about all the paper contains. That is not quite true; but every year, here at the opening of school, the local merchants are anxious to introduce themselves to you. And we are equally anxious to have the advertising which it is most effective.

Buy from these folks, whenever you possibly can. They are good people to know, and they are anxious to know you, too. Their advertising is a good will handshake. They do not necessarily expect you to trade two or five dollars worth more because of the ad; like the Chesterfield ad on the back page, Chesterfield does not expect, necessarily, to sell twenty packs more of cigarettes. Chesterfield and all the national advertisers in the Volette expect only to keep their names and goods before you. Incidentally, they do want you to buy their product when you get in the market for what they have to sell.

The same thing is true of good local people. They want you to buy from them, trade with them, eat at their boarding houses, sun-bathe at their fountains, and so on. But the reason in The Volette is more significant than that for us. The income from our advertisers helps by a large percentage to publish the college paper. Without our advertisers, you could not have from your own personal investment in it, the paper you have. While it is true that the advertising varies in the percent it covers, ranging from eighty percent at its highest to perhaps an average of fifty percent, it remains true that without our advertisers our paper could not prosper.

Therefore we again say: Patronize our advertisers. Tell them you saw their name in The Volette.

SAMPLE THE CLUBS

You are a freshman. You have heard a dozen different ways by now, no doubt, that the fall man is not a bookworm. The educated person is rounded. Has all the angles and bumps and corners filed down. In other words he presents a gently undulating surface—social, spiritual, scholarly, and all.

That is altogether as it should be, too. The Volette heartily subscribes to the well rounded personality theory.

Since the social side is not to be neglected, and because most of the social life of our campus revolves around the various clubs, it behooves you, Dear Freshman, to visit about at the various scheduled meetings of the numerous campus clubs and sample the pies and cakes and sandwiches displayed for your edification.

Don't be introducing a hurry to identify yourself with the clubs; pick those that strike you as being your meat, and be present at a few meetings. When you have found something definitely to your taste, then sign your name on the dotted line, and get busy being a good member of the group. Just because you are young and new in these parts is no reason for fist banging back with your finger in your mouth, as to speak. If you've been pretty good at something back home in your own high school, the odds are you'll be worth a lot here in the same way. So demonstrate your talents and make your contribution to the club of your choice. In time it will be able to do much for you.

But for some club and become identified with its social program.

THEATRE TICKETS

All through the year, now, you will be going to the picture show down town, and right here in the beginning let us urge you to form the habit of buying your tickets from the All Students Club. Five cents from the sale of each ticket goes back to you. That is to say, since you are automatically a member of the All Students Club by the very fact that you are a student in the Junior College, you buy a ticket for a picture, but the club has paid into twenty-five cents for it. The balance goes into the club's treasury, and then, in turn, is spent for all sorts of goodies for you, the student. That makes you a partner in the enterprise, remember.

So form the habit right here in the beginning, and at the same time save a penny or two over the regular price down town. Since the federal tax went on to the tickets the actual saving to the purchaser is an understatement, but one penny. But many a mickle makes a moolah, whatever that means. You do nothing wrong and you can buy a postcard with that and write to the home folks some time. We just think that is a suggestion. The idea we repeat is to buy your show tickets from the back stage at each of the drama and later when agents have been established at the various student arenas.

Sale of Season Tickets A Distinct Success — Vol Squad Grows Some

Sale of season tickets for the Junior Volunteers this season is progressing nicely, according to Coach Hug, and Joe Brown, manager of the campaign in town. Results will be gratifying for everybody, is the verdict at this time. The ticket sale will continue until the first game, scheduled for Sept. 27.

During the present week a number of valuable players have put in their appearance, Coach Hug reported. These include: Gelp Crawford of Dresden, Preacher Graves of Humboldt; it is not certain about Cravents, however; Howard Russell, of Franklin; Fred Wortman of Ridgeville; and Jimmy Campbell, of Humboldt.

Pre-season training goes on with two workouts a day for the players. A feature of the Martin Dresden high school game played on the Junior College field Friday night was a work out of the Junior Vols between halves.

However, all silver clouds have a dark lining on the lower side. Two strong players will not be with the team this season. They are Franklia Moore and Ellis Denham Moore, failed to make up some studies and so is ineligible. Because of the ill health of his father Denham, captain elect of the Junior Vols, cannot return to college this fall. The return of Campbell, however, is a definitely bright side of the athletic cloud, Coach Hug said.

Civilian Pilot Training Will Be Inaugurated At Junior College This Year

Inasmuch as it seems practically certain that the Junior College will have a unit for training civilian pilots, in connection with the war department at Washington, the following clipping from the Christian Science Monitor as to what the CAA is will be of interest to our students.

The clipping, in part, follows: "Plans to train 50,000 civilian pilots a year start with the new fiscal year July 1. Civilians receiving the new aviation training will be incorporated into various Army, Navy and Marine reserves to form part of the personnel nucleus to man the ultimate fleet of 50,000 airplanes proposed in the construction program.

The CAA launched its three-month program to train 10,000 pilots from colleges on a $4,000,000 appropriation last year. It will now undertake the new larger task, multiplied by five. Funds for the expanded program will be supplemental to the three billion dollar defense program now in Congress. The money in the latter program will be used for advance training of military pilots; the proposed new project will be elementary training, fitting successful graduates for later finishing courses if they so desire.

The graduates of the "base course," Mr. Roosevelt explained, are not finished military material, but their training means a corresponding saving ing in time for preliminary training for those who later enter Army or Navy service. The age group is 18 to 25. Men will be drawn from three main sources: schools and colleges where 10,000 were trained this year; citizens who have private flying licenses; young men not enrolled in school or college but who are willing and fit to undertake such training."

Cheer Leader Practice Gets Under Way As Football Opener Nears

With the first football game Friday night, Sept. 27, the training school for cheer leaders is in the making. Seventeen reported for practice on Monday evening, with one old member, La Rue Pentecost, leading and supervising under the direction of Miss Elliott. Miss Pentecost worked with the new members, helping with the motions and directing yells.

Miss Elliott expressed her appreciation for the large number that gathered for the practice. She complimented the freshmen very highly for their attentive and enthusiastic work. In the beginning of the meeting, Miss Elliott explained the difference between high school cheer leading and college cheer leading. "Cheer leading in college is on a higher plane, a little above the high school, in cheer leading. We want to keep this in mind and distinguish between them. We want to keep the college yells separate, a little better and above all, be college minded."

Together with the Sophomore member, Miss La Rue Pentecost, sixteen Freshmen reported, including Katherine Moody, Frank Hamilton, Martha Higgs, Burt Green, Nelson Martin, Anna Laura Paschall, Marjorie Warmath, Betty Coe, Lee Ella Robertson, Cooper Alexander, Maurine McCarren, Charlene De Lasmit, Sara Garner, Rubie Nell Stroud, Mary Anna Logan and Martha Nell Carman.

Out of this group, Miss Elliott will select two groups to be presented to the student body. The student body will elect the cheer leaders from these groups. Miss Elliott, with the help of Miss Pentecost, said "I believe we can have the best cheering ever, if you will work with me, and do all in your power to cooperate."

Miss Elliott's assistant, Miss Juanita Ward, also helped with the meetings.

Playwright Recent Visitor

Earl Hobson Smith, author of the play from which the successful photoplay "Swanee River" was made in Hollywood, was a recent visitor to the campus and the home of the Krolls.

He is director of dramatics at Lincoln Memorial University, Cumberland Gap, Tenn., where Kroll at one time was head of the English Department. Another of Smith's plays, which was produced in New York a season or so ago, is "Lincoln." In addition to these highly successful pieces, Mr. Smith is the holder of half a dozen more titles that have been produced in hundreds of high schools in the South.

Repairs About Complete

Repairs on the buildings and general improvements on the grounds of the Junior College are about complete. Mr. Long has had a number of boys working under him during the summer, and they have been putting in full time during vacation weeks in painting, fixing up windows and doors and woodwork; the book store has undergone a number of changes under C. E. Gatlin; considerable ditching and draining have been accomplished.

On the whole buildings and grounds present a clean and attractive appearance, in which the hands of S. R. Woods, Mr. McMahan, Mr. Long, and Gene Stanford, among others, are clearly discernible.
